Grand Lake Song of the Month: Until We Meet Again. Listen at GrandLakeCollection.com

May

Looking down the Colorado River from Bussey Hill

Released from the ice are river and creek,
Warmed by the spring's fair
quickenning eye;
The valley is green with hope
and joy;
The hoary winter has grown
so weak,
He has withdrawn to the rugged mountains.
From there he sends, but only in flight,
Impotent showers of icy hail That streak across the greening vale.

from Goethe's Faust;
poetic translation by Walter Kaufmann
